Bonfire Night

My favorite British holiday is Bonfire Night. British people celebrate it on November 5th. In towns and villages, and all around the country, there are big bonfires and lots of beautiful fireworks.

Before the day arrives, we make a model of a man called a "Guy." We use newspaper and straw, and dress the Guy in old clothes. Then we take him into the street, and nice neighbors give us money to buy fireworks. On Bonfire Night, we put the Guy on top of the bonfire and burn him. Poor Guy! It's spectacular.

Bonfire night is in November, so it's usually cold. We cook potatoes and hotdogs in the fire. We also make a traditional cake.

There are many kinds of fireworks like rockets, Roman candles, and firecrackers. I like the big rockets that shoot high up into the sky. It's a really exciting night and everyone has a wonderful time. Too bad it's only once a year!

1. When is Bonfire night?

2. What is the name of the model of the man?

3. What do the children do with the money?

4. What do they do with the "Guy" on Bonfire Night?

5. What is the weather like in November?

6. What do people eat on Bonfire Night?

7. Name three types of fireworks.

8. Which kind of fireworks does the writer like the most?
