Relaxing sounds

Not everyone has the same taste in music. There isn't just one kind of music that is good for everyone. To feel good it is important that you like the music being played. Some people relax to the sound of rock music, others like jazz. Recent studies have indicated that not all people react positively to special meditation or relaxation music. Loud music can be beneficial and live music also gives good results. One of the most important conclusions is that playing an instrument or making music has a positive effect. Some suggestions for relaxing are: choose music with a slow rhythm — slower than the natural heart beat, which is about 72 beats per minute. Music that has a repeating or cyclical pattern is effective in most people. If you need stimulation after a day of work, try faster music rather than slow calming music. When life is difficult, try music you know well — something you liked when you were a child. Familiarity often brings calmness. Listening to the sounds of nature, such as ocean waves or the calm of a deep forest, can reduce stress.

1. Is special meditation music good for relaxing?
Yes, but not for everyone.
2. What effect does playing an instrument have on people?
3. What kind of rhythm is good for relaxing?
4. What kind of music is good for stimulation?
5. What other sounds can be relaxing?
