Customs in Turkey

Last year I went to Istanbul in Turkey. It was fascinating to observe the different people there. Groups of women were covered in black from head to toe. Other women wore short skirts. Men kissed each other when they met. Men spit in the street. Some boys dressed in the latest fashions, other boys dressed in long robes.

In the bazaar people pushed past each other without saying sorry, but in every shop they offered us a cup of tea. The only situation I found really uncomfortable was when people talked to me and stood next to me with their faces only a few inches from mine.
