Galileo Galilei

Galileo Galilei was born on February 15, 1564 in Pisa, Italy. He started school when he was 10. At university, he studied mathematics and got a job as a teacher. During that time, he built a geometrical compass and invented the first thermometer.

What type of person was Galileo? He was very observant and curious. He always wanted to get the answers to his questions. If he didn't find them, he looked for them himself.

Galileo's greatest invention was the telescope. For the first time, man could see other planets and outer space. Over the years, Galileo's telescope has become better and better. Today, we can all watch the planets at night, just like Galileo did centuries ago. Galileo died at the age of 77, on January 8, 1642.

Some important lessons from Galileo are: Ask questions, watch everything around you, and try to find answers yourself.
