Soccer

Soccer goes back to the Middle Ages. At that time, it was a violent game played between rival villages. Each team had an unlimited number of players and there were no rules.

Modern soccer started to become popular in Britain in the 19th century. Soccer was cheap, it needed very little equipment, and you could play it anywhere, in any weather. The first team was Sheffield United. Intercity competitions were common and the Football League started in 1888. Workers liked watching the games Saturday afternoon when they finished work at noon. The number of spectators grew fast and special stadiums were built. The owners of the stadiums began to pay money to players to attract the best ones.

By 1930 crowds of 60,000 were the norm for the big teams. English sailors took the game to Spain, Italy, Brazil, and Argentina. The first World Cup was in 1930.
