Oxfam International

Oxfam International was founded in 1995 by a group of independent non-government organizations that wanted to work together internationally to reduce poverty. The name "Oxfam" comes from the Oxford Committee for Famine Relief, founded in Britain during the Second World War in 1942. Oxfam organizations are based in thirteen countries.

Oxfam believes that everyone in the world has five main rights: to earn a living; to have basic social services; to have life and security; to be heard; and to have an identity. The organization's main objective is to find real solutions to global poverty and to help poor people have more control over their lives. To do this, they have development programs relating to health, education, and human rights. Oxfam also works with people in humanitarian disaster or emergency situations, such as war and famine. In addition, they try to persuade governments and multinational corporations to change international policies and practices to give poor people more opportunities to improve their lives. In total they spend around $520 million globally on annual programs. You can find out more about Oxfam's work at www.oxfam.org.
