What makes soccer such a popular game all over the world? I think it is because the rules are simple and anyone can follow them. It can be played almost anywhere and it does not require special equipment.

In the US, soccer is not as popular as in other countries, but one young man from New Jersey, Tim Howard, played the game so well that he was selected to play for England's Manchester United. He began playing goalkeeper and became as famous as a rock star in England. He is not the best goalkeeper in England, but he's very consistent. Tim suffers from a medical condition called "Tourette's syndrome". This syndrome causes him to move in a strange way when he is stressed and so he has had to learn to keep a cool head when playing for his team. This could be why he is so consistently good!

1. Why does the writer think soccer is the most popular sport in the world?

The rules are simple and it can be played almost anywhere.

2. Where was Tim Howard born?

3. What happened when he began playing goalkeeper for Manchester United?

4. Why do you think Tim is so consistent as a goalkeeper?
