I had a serious accident when I was at school. I was 16 when it happened and now I'm 20. After my accident, things weren't easy. My lifestyle changed, but I was the same person. I couldn't walk, but I still enjoyed going out and doing things.

Now I'm at university studying architecture. I would like to be more independent, but for now, I have to live with my parents. They've been helpful. Together, we've found solutions to my problems. I've learned to drive and this has given me more independence. It's hard to meet new people because they don't always accept me.

For exercise, I play wheelchair basketball. This is fun and the other players are nice. I read a lot — especially fantasy books. The most frustrating thing is the time it takes me to do things, but I prefer to do things myself than to depend on other people.
