2 Read this e-mail and correct any mistakes with quantifiers you can find.

Thanks for agreeing to come and help with the party. Don't worry, we'll have too many time to get everything sorted out. I haven't invited plenty of people; the last time I had a party there were too much and it was a bit of a disaster as there wasn't some to drink. The only problem might be that any of Jim's friends don't like beer, so we'll have to get some wine as well. I won't have too much glasses - do you have any? For food I was thinking of getting any pizzas in - it's really easy and it won't cost too many. For twenty people how much pizzas do you think we're going to need? Another thing I've just thought of - I won't have any chairs to go round. Didn't you use to have any fold-up chairs in your flat? Could you maybe lend me some of them? Three or four should be a lot of. Also do you have too much CDs you could bring round? My collection isn't great and I don't have much dance music. I'm not sure if it's going to be easy for people to find the flat but they all have my mobile phone number so if people have much problems finding the flat they can always give us a call.

Teacher's notes:

Module 8 Things you can't live without

This worksheet is designed for use after completion of pages 80–85.

- 1 Students choose eight of the words and write a definition for them. Tell students to include relative clauses with that, which, who, whose, where and when in their definitions. When students have written their definitions they could read them to their partner who guesses which word is being defined.
- 2 Students read the e-mail and correct the mistakes with quantifiers.

Thanks for agreeing to come and help with the party. Don't worry, we'll have enough time to get everything sorted out. I haven't invited a lot of/many people; the last time I had a party there were too many and it was a bit of a disaster as there wasn't enough to drink. The only problem might be that some of Jim's friends don't like beer, so we'll have to get some wine as well. I won't have enough glasses - do you have any? For food I was thinking of getting some pizzas in - it's really easy and it won't cost too much. For twenty people how many pizzas do you think we're going to need? Another thing I've just thought of - I won't have enough chairs to go round. Didn't you use to have some fold-up chairs in your flat? Could you maybe lend me some of them? Three or four should be enough. Also do you have any CDs you could bring round? My collection isn't great and I don't have much dance music. I'm not sure if it's going to be easy for people to find the flat but they all have my mobile phone number so if people have any problems finding the flat they can always give us a call.
